Prep & plan your space

This is a chance to consider your must-haves, from the appliances that will make life in the kitchen easier to the amount of storage space you really want. Read these steps on how to all-importantly prep your space.

1 Imagine & plan

Before choosing your kitchen, it's a great idea to imagine how you're going to be using it. Are you wanting to create a space to kickstart your morning with the family or somewhere to entertain late into the night?

Remember to consider your appliances too. Kitchens are one of the biggest sources of water and energy use in the home, so look for ones that work efficiently to save you pennies and care for the planet.

Once you've imagined your new space and taken measurements, book a planning appointment with our team in store to get your project up and running.

diy.com/roi/planning-appointment

2 Prep & refresh

A new project is a great excuse to declutter – storage boxes are super useful to keep things organised while you're busy at work. Start by removing old units, disconnecting your power and water supplies and painting or freshening up walls, ceilings and any trims. If you're laying new flooring, it's worth doing this before fitting your new kitchen too. Cover any doorways and existing appliances with protective sheets to keep dust and debris to a minimum. Now you're ready to fit your cabinets!

Top tip

Keep your worktops looking as good as new, by treating solid wood surfaces regularly with oil (three to four times a year) and re-seal granite worktops once every five years.

3 Brighten & focus

When planning lighting, consider installing a flexible system so you can regulate areas of your kitchen independently. To create a clean, minimalistic look, choose recessed downlights and spotlights. Illuminating worktops with kitchen counter and cabinet lighting are great for cooking. Linear tube bulbs can make a noticeable difference – opt for LED bulbs which immediately reach full brightness, are energy efficient and cost effective. Suspend statement pendant lighting over tables, breakfast bars and islands to really light up gatherings and intimate dinners.
